

NEW YORKISMS.

From our own Correspondent. NEW YORK, Aug. 1, 1868. Nearly two weeks have elapsed since a gentleman named Spicer sent for a Seidlitz powder, upon swallowing which he died within a quarter of an hour. Neither a coroner's jury nor a post-mortem examination has yet elicited any information that is altogether satisfactory and conclusive. The testimony of the principal witnesses is mutually confusing, if not downright contradictory. The physician who was called in declared the powder Mr. Spicer swallowed contained 25 grains of arsenic; the druggist's clerk, who was arrested, takes his oath that at least half a hundred powders were sold identical in the mode of their prescription, and in the place from which they were taken, with the one sold to the unfortunate man's servant, George Spicer, brother to the deceased, says the latter had for some time past exhibited symptoms of probable insanity, and that he had once been laboring under extreme melancholy. Mrs. Spicer's account of her husband during the day preceding his death—presents him under circumstances which render it not impossible for him to have died voluntarily by his own hand. At least three of these statements are in opposition to one another, and probably nothing more will transpire about the affair than is known at present.

The funny though painful accident which happened the other evening to Monsieur Aujac, the accomplished and favorite tenor of "Barbe Bleue," has already become a subject of newspaper paragraph, but perhaps you may not have heard all the particulars. In the role of Barbe Bleue it becomes necessary for Monsieur Aujac—or at least he thinks it becomes necessary for him—to wear an immense beard, which, by being disposed in an artistically homicidal manner, is greatly expressive of Blue Beard's remorseful and murderous purpose. Tinctured with verdigris properly intermingled with modifying chemicals, the tout ensemble is sufficiently frightful for all stage purposes. On Tuesday evening Monsieur Aujac appeared in this make up for the eighth time. Hitherto he had experienced no inconvenience—except from the perspiration promoted by so near a propinquity to the footlights—but on this particular evening the poisonous voice of the verdigris began to make itself heard, and the subtle particles, insinuating themselves into the pores of his skin, caused him great pain and an almost insupportable sensation of sickness. Next to soldiers and firemen, artists are in some things the greatest heroes. Aujac proved himself one. He rose with the occasion and the curtain, and it was only when that drapery fell for the third time, and the fourth act was to be commenced, that his powers of endurance refused to last longer, and Mr. Bateman coming forward made the necessary explanations and apologies. A physician was called in, and the person Blue Beard was removed to his hotel, a martyr to his devotion to an artistic make-up. A couple of evenings saw him out again, and I am sure the public thinks none the less of his voice because he thought so much of his verdigris.

Do you know that electricity and electricians, as medical agents and operators, are beginning to make themselves known here as well as in Boston, in spite of the intense opposition of those physicians who class themselves as belonging to the only recognized legitimate schools? For the last sixteen years, electricity, as a therapeutic agent, has been slowly growing into use, and now the haudsonest and most expensive neighborhoods are studded with electrical establishments, which must do an exceedingly good business to defray the enormous rents. I do not undertake to espouse the cause so strongly, for I know perhaps little enough about it; but I have seen enough of its professors to believe they rise above the standard of quacks and do a good deal of conscientious hard work with the majority of their patients. Their plan is to use no medicine at all, believing as they do that medicine does not act directly upon the system, but only at second hand, by disturbing what they term the "polarities." Neither is the life of one of these electricians particularly easy. He has to do a good deal of muscular work, which is a very strong contrast to the inert suavity of the legitimate, who spend half their working hours in writing prescriptions, and the other half in giving them. I have before me a well authenticated case, which I might particularize more closely if I chose, of one well educated physician of the old school, who, after having been converted to electricity as a therapeutic agent, and practicing it with success for several years deliberately sold off his baths and his batteries, and went back to pills and powders again. "Why?" he was asked. "What is the reason of this apostasy?" "It is too hard work," was the reply. "This rubbing people down, and sponging and bathing them thirteen hours out of the twenty-four is too hard work. I believe in electricity. I believe it is the best and most universal remedy under heaven; but it's too hard work. All I have to do, now that I have gone back to my old practice, is to drive about five or six hours each day, and write prescriptions in my study the rest of the time." Well, it was very candid in him, at least, to make the acknowledgment. Better people than he have in their time preferred cash to conscience, and found that the more they lost of the one the more they gained of the other. In Boston I see there has been a great advance during the last year or two in the therapeutic use of electricity, and, indeed, my experience informs me that it would take a more than ordinary dose of lightning to brighten one's wits after bewildering them by endeavoring, for the first time, to thread, unguided, the tangled streets of the Hub.

Among the numerous importunities with which the passer along Broadway is beset, is the having thrust into his hands little two-inch long and one-inch wide cards, printed with the information that they are "good for twenty-five cents or seventy-five cents worth of ferricytogen, made and finished in ten minutes." The rush to these galleries is principally on Sundays, when the kind of people who throng to Hoboken and Coney Island for pleasure, flock to these dens in quest of cheap ferricytogen. Dens they more properly deserve to be called than any thing else, for photographs and ferricytogen can be taken there in all degrees of disreputability by the sitters, and the quickness and cheapness of the institution cause it to be greatly in vogue with abandoned youth of both sexes. Of course there are exceptions among the galleries and their proprietors, as there are exceptions among the people who go there. But he who is intent on procuring a large measure of purity, at an extremely low rate, may safely cherish for reference one of these cards that are poked at him by street-boys. For the last few days clouds of mosquitoes have swept over the city, such as we are not often blessed with from the Jersey shores. They have been blown in what might be called "biting" breezes, in at open windows, at every hour of the night and day, and packed stages and cars have shown opposing lines of faces bubbling over with mosquito bites, and the rosy excrescences left by them. For once the mosquitoes have shared with the thermometer the honors of conversation; and at the present moment the hand that guides this pen is being pricked in the sides of its intent by the indefatigability of at least a dozen of those microscopic vampires.

Meanwhile a murder, a suicide, a car accident, a wife-battering case, and two or three assault and battery sensations have helped to fill up the week's iniquities. The Chinese embassy, so to speak, is playing a star engagement at the Westminster Hotel; but, like the other amusements, fails to draw crowded houses. The Mos gomery Light Guard got up a competition or if on Thursday afternoon, with Company B, of the 12th Regiment N. G. S. N. Y., but so many invitations were issued to people who, by crowding the best spots in the parade grounds, proved that they had no business to be invited at all, that thousands of the better disposed observers left before the evolutions were over; so that, taking it altogether, the drill cannot be regarded as other than a conspicuous failure. The Tribune is sedulously striving, through its accomplished and devoted dramatic critic, to revive an interest in the legitimate drama. Mr. William Winter, more affectionately known among his confreres as "Willie Winter," is taking advantage of the occasional newspaper vacations, caused by the dull season, to write a number of fugitive essays on the present condition and requirements of the stage. Some months ago a once prominent maestro remarked to me that that writer was too much on the "aesthetic." The speaker did not follow up the epithet with any course of argument or reflection, but returned to it twice in the course of three minutes, with the pertinacity of a man who feels morally convinced that he has administered a clincher. I, therefore, do not know what peculiar importance was attached to the epithet, but I do know that Mr. Winter's devotion to whatever is best in dramatic art is slowly and surely effecting a change in public opinion, which will probably reach its culmination about the date of the opening of Edwin Booth's theatre here next fall. EASY POLISH! LASTING POLISH! BRILLIANT POLISH!—A polish that costs nothing, as each box costing 25 cents contains more than 25 cents' worth of boot. This is the new boot polish brought out by J. E. Dobbie, proprietor of the celebrated Electric Soap (whose immense works are located at Sixth street and Germantown avenue). His new Polish will do on a world-wide reputation. Mr. Dobbie makes it a rule to offer no new thing that is not superior to all rivals. This accounts for his great success. His new Blacking would have been in the market months ago, but for the fact that he was determined to bring it to absolute perfection before offering it, which he has at last accomplished through a series of the most thorough and scientific chemical experiments. For this reason the Blacking will undoubtedly have a great demand "from the word go." Dealers will act wisely by supplying themselves with it as soon as possible, and to re-orientates the boot-polish world in his usual quiet style, by thundering his great invention at the gates of public opinion through bill posters and the power of the public Press. All hail to the wonderful new Polish! What a relief to the thousands of young men who have hitherto lamented the short-lived shine of their polished boots. Verily the world moves.

THE GREAT TRIAL OF SEWING MACHINES.—The grand as it is the world! The judges, the whole world! Trial of fifteen years' duration. The Wheeler and Wilson the champion in the grand trial. Daily throughout the world where only true merit gains favor, and superiority wins the race, the Wheeler and Wilson Sewing Machine stands triumphantly the champion, by the verdict of the people, as shown by the number manufactured and sold by the several Sewing Machine Companies, from the start up to the time of the expiration of the Howe Patent, September 12, 1867.

THE WHEELER & WILSON MANUFACTURING COMPANY, 309 600. Singer Manufacturing Company, 202,000; Grover & Baker S. M. Company, 138,000; Wilcox & Gibbs S. M. Company, 67,000; Howe Machine Company, 35,000; Empire Sewing Machine Company, 14,000; Wood Sewing Machine Company, 7,000.

G. & B.—These are the initials of the most honored firm in America—Messrs. Grover & Baker, proprietors and manufacturers of the world renowned Sewing Machines which bear their name. These machines have done more to revolutionize home economy in the way of saving labor and promoting health, than any other in existence, and their adoption in families seems destined to become universal, judging from the fact that even at this exceedingly dull season the warehouses of the company in this city, No. 78 Chestnut street, are daily thronged with customers. In fact, so busy has the agent's force been kept in receiving and filling orders that they have been unable up to this time to leave the city for a single day. The mechanism of these instruments is worthy of the world-wide homage it is receiving. Every body should see them in operation.

FORBET SPRINGS are situated on the summit of the Allegheny, in Cambria county. For those desiring a healthful summer resort, this is the place. The hotel kept by Mr. John McIntosh, in the most admirable manner. The rooms are large and airy, and always supplied with fresh cold spring-water, which is seldom found at watering places. The Ebensburg branch railroad from Cresson carries visitors to Kaylor's station, two miles from the Springs, and carriages await them there.

ONE newspaper writer gives the following receipt for giving brilliancy to the eyes:—"Scrub them early at night and once more early in the morning," and you would add, for brilliancy in gentlemen's apparel, "Scrub your eyes to all so-called bargains in low priced clothing, and open them to what is really cheap, because good," and secure such by visiting Charles Stokes & Co. Clothing House, under the Continental.
